About Damask Rose In Our Region

Damask rose with the scientific name of Rosa Damascena Miller is a small deciduous shrub of the rose family. Other names of this flower in Persian are Sorkh rose, Mohammadi rose and in Latin it is Bulgarian rose, Kazanlik rose, Damask rose.

The scientific name of this plant is taken from the city of Damascus in Syria and this name has been used for this flower since the Crusades. This plant is native to Iran and was taken from Iran to Damascus and then to Europe around 1276-1254 AD.

Damask roses are planted in long rows. With proper care, each rootstock will flower properly for up to 30 years. Roses bloom in spring. In the middle of this season, rose fields become beautiful paradises. Flowers should be collected in a short time, so pickers enter the fields every morning before dawn and collect the flowers by hand without the help of any tools and equipment. They have a chance before the dew dries over them to reach the destination. The flowers collected after 9 A.M have less essential oil and poor quality. Fresh petals are sent to extraction system to obtain rose water, the rose essential oil, absolute, concrete and etc.

One of the most famous rose-growing areas in Iran, which is known as the "village that smells like paradise", is the place where the rose festival is held every year on the last Friday of July .The village of Gunbarf, which is located 10 km south of the city of Osko, Tabriz East Azerbaijan, and in the laguage of the local Turkish people "Gunbar" is synonymous with a sunshade place

It is one of the tourism sites of the province and its stepped gardens bear no resemblance to the rose gardens of other rose growing areas and are located on the slopes of the hills. Rose flower with heavenly extracts is known as one of the identity symbols of this village and has placed this divine gift as a source of income for the residents of this village.

According to experiments, the quality of roses in this region is one of the best in the world and due to having sweet flowers compared to other types of flowers in hot and dry regions of the world that are bitter and must be boiled before using in the food system to remove the bitterness and in this case, all the nutrients of the flower are lost, but our flowers are sweet and edible from mountainous climate which casted to be used exactly in food system, and in terms of the quality of the essential oil, the active ingredient in the essential oils extracted from flowers in this region is high and in the top ranks of the world.
